During the period of time that gold was considered to be a store of wealth, investors were advised to invest in gold for the ability to preserve and store value. With the advent of the printing press, metals became more widely available and prices decreased, causing investors to rethink the wisdom of gold. Today, many investors use a gold exchange traded fund (ETF) as a way to own gold stocks. The ETFs are traded in the same manner as other commodities. If you choose to invest, consider an exchange traded fund over a private securities exchange.

Taking the next step Once your investment is established, you may wish to take additional action. One action that could be beneficial would be to create an IRA rollover. Many people elect to avoid a rollover by claiming the cash or making a withdrawal from their retirement account. Both of these are unnecessary tax events and are both costly. In general, an IRA rollover would be beneficial in two ways: You may be eligible to receive a tax-free return on your investment - averaging around 7 percent after 20 years. You will gain access to the future tax benefits that would be released by a traditional IRA. You will gain access to the future tax benefits that would be released by an IRA rollover. You may also open a safe deposit box to store your investments. Another method
