This course is for the MSc in Clinical Biochemistry. Many of the topics in this course cover the basics of biochemistry. However, the material in this course is supplemented with the latest academic research and practical experience of the course tutors. The course is structured to enable you to gain a thorough understanding of the basic principles of biochemistry and the chemistry, behaviour and function of biological molecules. You will learn about the fundamental processes and mechanisms of the major metabolic pathways and how they are controlled, how cells are formed and how they work. Recommended background This course is normally delivered in six to eight weekly 50 minute lectures over a period of one year (4 x 50 minutes). The University of Edinburgh is one of the world's most international universities. Students from 139 countries and 57 different nationalities have studied at the University of Edinburgh since 1848. Students study at all levels from undergraduate to postgraduate and our programmes are open to international students
